

How much does a Space influence your Life?

By Roseline Deleu - Feng Shui Master, Author and inspirational Speaker

In Feng Shui ... Your home represents your life. Your business space reveals how prosperous and reliable you are.

Our overall experience of a space, whether indoors or outside, is a combination of our interpretation of all that our senses pick up - light, heat, sound, temperature, smell, texture, shape etc... This combination of various forms of energy is called Chi and every environment has its own special Chi.

We, as individuals also have a personal Chi that includes factors as vitality, temperament, appearance and so on. Since we are all different, the effect of the Chi of any particular environment on our personal Chi can be said to have good or bad effect depending on how it affects us. Although you may not have heard it expressed in this way before, you are already aware of this phenomenon. You know that some places feel better than others although you may not always be able to pin-point exactly what it is that is creating the difference. Feng Shui principles help to identify these factors so that you can do something about them in your own home if necessary.

An environment with good Chi feels, to most people, comfortable, supportive, pleasing and harmonious - the kind of space that immediately makes you feel welcome and which you don't want to leave. Our objective is to make our homes like this. Of course there is no absolute quantification of Chi. Our actual experience of space will depend on our own varying Chi and the environmental variables such as light, weather, season, temperature etc. The idea however is to create a home that satisfies most people, most of the time. Different parts of a home have different functions, so what represents harmony and good Chi for a bedroom, may differ from the harmony and good Chi appropriate for a living room or kitchen.

"When you decide to move into a new Home, you immediately benefit of its vibes"

Be aware that your new place still vibrates the energies of the previous tenants or live-in owners. Moving in without clearing the space and making any changes, can mean that very shortly you could experience the same 'life challenges' or 'life benefits' they were living while in that place.

The Chi still flows the same way as before as the walls remain in the same place; only the furniture placement alters some of the energies. A home sees often the same pattern repeating itself.

When the 'Love' sector (area 2) of a house is missing, many of the previous couples living there could have divorced... Yes, I purposely used 'could have' as not all homes with a sector 2 missing should be considered as hopeless for relationships, it can be adjusted and fixed with the guidance of a competent Feng Shui Practitioner.

A 'sick' house seeing the same disease repeating with various occupants could simply be because the bed placement remained the same. EMF (Electro Magnetic Fields) levels and ley lines (Earth subtle radiation lines) should be checked and attended to.

In any case, always ask neighbours and real estate agent what happened in the home before you seriously consider purchasing it.

"Renting or buying a previously prosperous office or shop is a good omen"

Often, the best position for a business is on the corner of two streets. Nevertheless, if inside a street, it can be auspicious too: people respond instinctively to unseen energy lines that attracts them into a shop or business. Ley lines are invisible; having one leading through the entry of your business will encourage people to come in. Having a well decorated office and shop front will attract the 'eye' and create a welcoming environment.

Leasing a business location that previously has known bankruptcy needs to be considered very carefully and will definitely need important Feng Shui adjustments.
